

came the rapidly warming air produced condensation, and water from the gas bag dripped the men. A fall of 25 degrees was experienced in two hours, between 6 and 8 o'clock Tuesday.

The aeronauts made anxious inquiry as to what time they must have crossed the Shenandoah Valley, and were disappointed when informed that they passed many miles south of that famous stretch. They were much pleased with the fertile valleys between the Appalachian and Blue Ridge ranges, but saw nothing to admire in West Virginia.

The balloon New York, in which was made the ascension which will go down into history as one of the most remarkable flights of the ages, is the most expensive ever built. It consists of twenty layers of rubber and two layers of balloon cloth. It has a capacity of 80,000 cubic feet of gas. The basket is 1 1/2 by 5 1/2 feet square. The equipment consisted of the combination gun, a supply of German army rations for use in case of an emergency, two pairs of blankets, eight quarts of water, two roast chickens, two loaves of bread, a few oranges and some coffee in thermos bottles.

In addition, there was a complete line of aeronautic instruments, including an aneroid, a compass and maps of every State. Forty-two bags of sand, weighing about 2,100 pounds, were carried.

The balloon cup.

Captain Chandler, of the United States Army, who for two years past has held the Lahn Cup, won it in a flight of 473 miles. The cup is given by the Aero Club of America in honor of Lieutenant Colonel S. A. H. who won a remarkable flight in Paris in 1905, and whose services in balloon and aeroplane work have brought him distinction.

Mr. Forbes was pilot of the balloon Conqueror when he and his aid, Augustus Post, fell 2,000 feet through the air and crashed through the roof of a farmhouse and into a woman's bedroom during the international races in Berlin. He is the half owner of the New York, the other interest being the property of Clifford B. Harwood.

When Mr. Forbes won the duration prize in the Indianapolis contest he remained in the air 35 hours and 12 minutes, landing at Corinth, Miss. In Morgan county, Alabama, the balloon was shot at three times by moon-shiners, who, it is presumed, thought a new scheme of detection had been invented by revenue officers.

Ends Dispute Over Trophy.

Yesterday's flight put an end to the claim of St. Louis, Mo., for the Lahn Cup. Von Paul and Joseph M. O'Reilly, in a race last week, landed at Little Lake, Minn., 550 miles from St. Louis. Von Paul intended competing for the Lahn Cup, but forgot to take a letter he had written to the Aero Club of America that he was a contestant. This precaution was neglected by Mr. Forbes.

Mr. Fleischmann, Mr. Forbes' aid, is a well-known sportsman. He owns valuable race-horses, and shoots all over the world. He has been in Africa to see if the Roosevelt party has left anything worth shooting.

Beat Speed Record.

Modern in his statements as to the manner in which he handled his balloon, and yet flushed with pride over his achievement, Mr. Forbes talked with vivacity last night. "Won the Lahn Cup and beat the speed record," was the burden of his story of the trip.

Why, think of the speed. We came from St. Louis to a point near Richmond in far less time than the fastest express train could make it.

I kept the balloon far up in the air. I prefer great height in flights, and believe it is the best plan for the aeronaut. We had absolutely no hitch of any kind, unless it was the freezing of our water and sand. We got cold enough to have been on a North Pole trip, but we didn't get that. It is a curious fact that while in the air one wants to eat very little.

Flying Is His Sport.

"Flying is my sport. When I get tired of work and want to play a little I leave my office and take a flight. In Europe sailing in a balloon is the sport of kings and princes. Over there, where people take much more time for play than here, aeronautics is a favorite pastime.

Knows a lot of extraordinary men who have done a big thing. A Frenchman who is the celebrated man of the world. He is the sort of fellow who discovers poles and kills lions for fun."

His remark was promptly and vigorously repeated by Mr. Fleischmann, who takes his part in the conversation as a matter of course. He has made half a dozen flights, he said, but knows nothing really about the principle of the thing. As to the other count of Mr. Forbes' indictment, he admitted that "he goes in for shooting a little."

"But cut out the fame part of it," he said, "that to Forbes, who is entitled to it."

PRESS NOTES FROM THE THEATRES.

"Salome Jane."

Messrs. Delamater and Norris' superb production of "Salome Jane" is to be the attraction at the Academy to-night.

This is the same great play and scenic equipment that had the notable run of one solid year in New York at the Liberty Theatre. The play, headed by Miss Louise Coleman, is far above the average seen with a traveling company, being composed exclusively of players of high standing and reputation. "Salome Jane" is said to be the dramatic delight of a decade, being a romance of the golden West, dramatized by Paul Armstrong from Bret Harte's story called "Salome Jane's Kiss," in which are embodied so many refreshing characterizations, just such as are needed in daily life at its picturesque and action.

"Beau Brummel."

No stronger scene has ever been played on the American stage than the fourth act of "Beau Brummel." In this act, held in the dimly candle-lit room to which the once great Beau Brummel had degenerated, the doddler, Beau Brummel, announces his guests of former days, the royal names and the princely friends who come no more. Soliloquy gives the strongest character of the man, his passions and feelings, and in this act the speeches, words of welcome and torrent of sarcasm with which Beau Brummel greets his friends, combine to form a masterpiece never to be forgotten by the audience. Norman Hackett has been selected this year to play the title role of Beau Brummel, which appears at the Academy to-morrow night.

TWO MOONSHINERS CAUGHT.

Much Liquor Destroyed Near Durham After Pledge Encounter.

DURHAM, N. C., October 13.—Late this afternoon revenue officers captured a 100-gallon illicit still about fifteen miles from this city, making a seizure of over 1,200 gallons of liquor, presumably for evidence. One of the officers had a fierce encounter with the men, the latter having been badly beaten and being considerably bruised. The captured men, one white and one black, were brought to Durham and held in bond to appear before the United States commissioner.

COLLECTOR WILL REPLY TO GATES

M. K. Lowry Says He Can "Clear Up" Sensational Statements of Former Chief.

MAY TESTIFY FOR CASPAR

Turmoil Accompanied by Unofficial Announcement That J. G. Luce Is After Job.

Revenue Collector M. K. Lowry, of the Second District of Virginia, the conduct of whose office was attacked in the United States District Court by D. A. Gates, former chief of revenue agents, will be called to-day as a witness for the defense in the trial of J. E. Casper, the former collector, charged with fraud in connection with the operation of the Fair Oaks Distillery. Mr. Gates' statements, based upon conditions found existing at the plant in an official investigation in 1907, include a reflection upon the conduct of Mr. Lowry's office by himself and his appointed deputies.

Close upon the heels of the sensational utterances of Mr. Gates is the unofficial announcement that J. G. Luce, of Sabot, Goodland county, is an applicant for the appointment now held by Mr. Lowry, and information from Washington is that his papers have been on file there since last week. Mr. Luce would not discuss the matter when seen yesterday by a Times-Dispatch reporter.

May Investigate Office.

Although no definite statement can be made locally as to what the outcome of Mr. Gates' statements may be, it is said, and on good authority, that he is entirely within the bounds of probability that when all the facts are brought to the attention of United States Commissioner of Revenue Royal E. Cabell an investigation of the local office may be ordered. Records of the case, unless Casper is acquitted, will be sent to Washington, but even if he should be freed it is believed to be most likely that all that has happened will reach the ears of the head of the department.

In view of the fact that I may be called in the case," said Mr. Lowry, when asked for a statement by a representative of The Times-Dispatch, "I had rather not say anything until the present procedure is concluded. I am sure that my statement, if I am placed on the stand, will put this matter in a very different light. I am not fearful of the consequences. I am not called into the trial I will give out a statement, explaining my position. I am willing at all times to have my office, and the conduct of the men under me, examined, and I will facilitate the investigators in every way possible."

Mr. Lowry will leave the city on urgent business this morning, but will return in time to appear, if called, this afternoon. The collector attended the trial yesterday afternoon, which was devoted almost entirely to hearing the testimony of J. E. Southward, division deputy collector, who is the first witness to take the stand for the defense. The prosecution closed at 12 o'clock. Mr. Southward's testimony was chiefly in regard to the location of the plant, and the methods of the government in procuring records with regard to the operation of the distillery.

Try to Impach Gates.

As a counter sensation to that sprung by Mr. Gates' statements, L. O. Wenderburg, counsel for Casper, in arguing the admissibility of a question which the court disallowed, stated as his reason for asking it that he wished to impeach Mr. Gates' testimony. The question, which had been propounded by J. A. Lamb, associate attorney for the defense, was, "Mr. Southward, Mr. Gates said he had found irregularities and reported them to you. Is that true?"

Judge Waddill interrupted to say that he understood that Gates had said the irregularities had been reported to Casper. The question was not answered.

Although Mr. Southward's testimony, which was not concluded yesterday, did not serve to bring out any other irregularities that an effort will be made to refute Mr. Gates' statements, the fact remains that Mr. Lowry has been called, and his statement is that he will "put the matter in a different light." Mr. Southward will resume the stand at 9 o'clock this morning, and will probably be kept there for several hours, as the contentions of attorneys yesterday prevented any great progress in taking evidence.

One unusual circumstance in the trial is the fact that the prosecution is relying for conviction on the testimony of men in the department at Washington, while the defense seeks to prove the innocence of the accused through depositions in Collector Lowry's office, who were responsible to the government for the correct conduct of the still during the period in which the alleged defalcations are said to have been perpetrated.

Defense Blocked by Court.

Time and again yesterday Mr. Wenderburg tried and failed to introduce evidence regarding the plans of the distillery, claiming that the meal, supply, house was not located in the building occupied by the distillery proper, and therefore was not under the supervision of the government. District attorney Lewis objected to every question along this line, claiming that the law defined the premises included in the place of manufacture. "The meal house," said Judge Lewis, "is not a part of the distillery."

CURES REMOVE DOUBT ABOUT ECZEMA CURE.

Read What Your Druggists Say About Oil of Wintergreen Compound.

Druggists Owens & Minor submit the following to the readers of The Times-Dispatch:

For several years we have announced, with our recommendation, that we had found a positive cure for eczema; a simple skin wash, oil of wintergreen compounded with other healing ingredients.

Yet we know there are people right in this town who have eczema, and still have never tried this remedy.

We have, therefore, arranged with the D. D. Laboratories of Chicago for a special offer of a trial bottle of 25 cents instead of the $1.50 bottle as regularly sold.

We offer this trial bottle with our recommendation and assurance that just as soon as the patient washes his itching skin, this mild liquid will take the itch away instantly.

It is the Best Natural Laxative Water FOR CONSTIPATION

"As much as a part of this distillery as the still itself, and if it is allowed to be shown that this defendant had a right to bring large quantities of supplies for the manufacture of distillery spirits to his meal room, which is separated by a door from the main plant, it will be useless for us to go further."

One claim made by the prosecution is that enormous quantities of grain were shipped to the Fair Oaks Distillery, which, from the records, could not have been consumed in the manufacture of the quantity of spirits reported for sale.

Mr. Gates, whose testimony caused the first great sensation of the trial, is a member of the Fair Oaks Distillery, and left for his home Tuesday afternoon.

Following is an extract of the testimony of Mr. Gates taken from the record of the official stenographer:

Mr. Lamb: Question: You did not tell him that you went down and found a violation of the law, and you came here and say a thing like that, and say you have not confidence enough in Mr. Lowry to tell him about it?

Answer: You heard what I said.

No Personal Criticism.

On re-examination by the District Attorney: Question: You made some allusion to Mr. Lowry, the collector. Did you mean to go beyond his official capacity in any opinion you expressed here?

Answer: Yes, I did mean to go beyond his official capacity. To start with, I was not called upon to report to Mr. Lowry; it was not customary to do so. I was called upon to report to Mr. Southward, and it was not proper for me to report to him. I was called upon to report to Mr. Southward, and it was not proper for me to report to him.

Question: In regard to what you said about your confidence in Mr. Lowry, I thought it then and think so now.

Answer: I was founded on such things as I found here on every hand. It was founded on that belief.

By the court—Question: "I understand that what you said was that Mr. Lowry, the collector, and now was applicable to the administration of his office and nothing else?"

Answer: Yes, I said nothing and nothing else. I know absolutely nothing about Mr. Lowry's personal character, and did not mean to reflect upon him in a personal way. I was only referring to his conclusion I reached from the conditions I found in his district regarding his subordinates.

Could Not Trust Deputies.

By Mr. Lamb: You said you could not trust Mr. Lowry, and said in anger what I have found out since verifies it.

Answer: "What it that?"

Question: "You said you could not trust Mr. Lowry, and said in anger what I have found out since verifies it."

Answer: That is practically what I said.

Question: Did you mean to say that as a reflection of the man's personal honor and integrity?

Answer: Let me say exactly what I said. I mean to say that I was down here making these investigations for some three, four or five weeks in this district, and I referred to the conditions I found in his district regarding his subordinates.

Mr. Luce Is Reticent.

Mr. Luce, who is spoken of as an applicant for Mr. Lowry's office, was a member of the Fair Oaks Distillery, and was the Republican nominee for Congress at the last presidential election. He was a vigorous campaigner.

regard to my application for the collector's office should have looked out at this time," said Mr. Luce, "but I will neither affirm nor deny the truth of the report. I cannot discuss the question at the present time. Mr. Lowry is my personal friend, and I have nothing on earth against him. The news of Mr. Luce's action leaked out accidentally yesterday, and was contained from Washington last night with the statement that his papers had been on file since May."

Mr. Lowry assumed control of the office for a four-year term in December, 1905, and his commission expires in December. He will be an applicant for the position of collector of the second district of Virginia, and will express surprise when news was conveyed to him that Mr. Luce had entered the field.

L. G. Redmon, an expert in the conduct of distilleries, who was summoned by the prosecution, was denied the privilege of testifying in the case against Casper, on the grounds that he had no knowledge bearing directly on the case in question. The testimony of evidence was probably not concluded before to-morrow, and it may be that the jury will not have the case on the merits until the next day.

Again, in the Stafford case, which President Taft is to decide, Deputy Collector Youngblood was severely scored by Assistant District Attorney Talley, in his argument for the acquittal of the case before the jury. As the case of Casper is in progress none of the attorneys will discuss any details of the proceedings or express any opinion in regard to it outside of the courtroom.

PRESIDENT SILENT AS TO CRANE AFFAIR

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 13.—Up to midnight no response had been received by Charles R. Crane from President Taft to the dispatch he sent the latter yesterday morning tendering his resignation as United States minister-designate to China. Mr. Crane did not appear to think it strange that he had no word from the President, expressing the belief that Mr. Taft probably had been "too much on the go" to give consideration to the matter.

Asked if he expected to stay here for a time, Mr. Crane said he was undecided as to his movements. "There are other places besides Washington," said Mr. Crane, "where a fellow can have a good time."

Secretary Leaves City.

Secretary Knox left here this afternoon for his home at Valley Forge. He said there was nothing for him to do with regard to the case of Mr. Crane, and that, so far as he was concerned, "it was a closed incident."

Mr. Crane, who has been in the city for some time, has been very active in his efforts to secure the resignation of Mr. Taft. He has been very active in his efforts to secure the resignation of Mr. Taft.

Speculation was rife to-day as to the possible effect of the incident on the future official relations of the United States with both China and Japan. It is admitted on all sides that the situation is extremely delicate, and that any move on the part of the United States government would be a serious matter.

According to one diplomatic authority, Japan has a right to feel that the American Secretary of State has impugned her motives in making the Manchurian treaty with China, and that she has been unjustly criticized for her conduct in the matter.

Significance is given to these allegations by the fact that both Japan and China have been constrained to change their diplomatic representatives in the United States, and that the newly-appointed representatives are apparently of a different type.
